THE SIXTH FORM

Class History

For many a petty being 'ere Hartley came,
But Hartley was the pettiest of all,
He came and with Van Buzz the fifer's aid,
He built for us a castle on The Hill.
A castle with an outward opening door
O'er which was bold emblazoned "26,"
So thus was founded in this town of dirt
A good round table for the knights so bold.

These two for one year rode alone together,
And many goodly states and kingdoms seen,
And Hartley got his meals along the road,
Now some who read will know just what I mean.

A year went by and Hartley bravely strived,
To find some worthy knights to join his court.
But none could find until he met a man
Whose breadth was almost equal to his height,
And who began to talk, and started thus,
"Big boy! last vacation I had five—"
And Hartley was amazed and for the day,
He listened to the stranger's wondrous tales
Then when the darkness came upon the earth,
They rode back to the castle, steady friends,
And Hartley knighted Wolf a knight and so,
Another year of table history ends.

One day as Hartley rode his steed afield
He spied a youth whose eye was clear and bright,
And quickly called the young man to his side,
Then said, "Young man if you will come with me,
A member will I make you of my court."
So thus came Austen to the noble's table,
And with the noble lords has laboured since.
As Wolf rode through the town alone one day,
A-hunting for some noble deeds to do,
He saw a gentleman take out his purse,
And twenty-five rocks to a driver pay,
And help a young fair lass into a car,
And struck with awe the noble Wolf rode 'way.
So Hartley when Wolf told this wondrous deed,
Called Koontz and for the doing dubbed him knight.
Now Koontz became a doer of great deeds,
And once when riding over Chicken hill,
He saw a cloud of smoke against the sky,
Which grew so thick and heavy that he rode,
And called the Pottstown fire department out.
But as the men approached the dang'rous spot

THE DIAL

A darling little man stuck out his head,
And said, "For heaven's sake what's all the row,
You all run back to mama's apron string,
And let a man enjoy a little smoke!"
King Hartley knew that any one so brave,
That he would play with fire would make a knight,
As fearless as the world would ever know,
So Jellinghaus was added to the list,
And straight away he taught the nobles all,
The pleasure of a harmless little smoke.
Another day as four knights rode along,
They came upon a most peculiar sight
Two men were bargaining about a ball,
And one a better salesman seemed to be,
And so well used his bargain talking that
King Hartley made the purchase for himself.
This level-headed business man, the knights
Decided would be valuable to have,
So Schafer and the ball were taken home.
But 'ere the ball was gotten to the castle,
It by some magic means became a man,
Who said, "Please sir, I've come to join your court,
Be pleased to know me as Sir Joseph Close."
One day the knights had ridden far and wide,
Until they to a place unheard of came,
The name of which was known as "Ladiesville"
Where none but women were supposed to live.
Now there they found a man these ladies loved,
So much, that when the other men they left,
They could not bear to leave behind at all,
And so they kidnapped him away from home.
The handsome man was taken by the knights,
And afterwards was dubbed "Sir Jimmie Black."
Four other men they found were women-haters,
And these they found alone and in the woods,
And one of them was chopping down a tree,
His name was made to be Sir Laurence Stuart.
The other three were not so deep in hate,
And even later fell for women three,
But they were also added to the table,
So Hiester, Hazard, Herbert, to the list,
Were added, and with all the noble knights,
They finished out the year of twenty-two.
In this same year a youth named Leggett came,
And as a scullion for a year he worked,
Until he knocked his teeth out with a broom,
And for this noble deed was made a knight.
Perhaps it also would be well to add,
That Halitosis drifted in one night,
The boys said we'll give him a dirty job,
And so he hath this chronicle to write.

THE DIAL

Please God! Another year is safely passed,
Again we start our yearly work to do,
But 'ere this time a new addition's made,
Whose name the longest is upon the list,—
Sir William Binns Hands and Feet Charleston Soft Shoe,
Which doesn't fit the meter of the line,
But if you had a name like that to write,
I'd like to know just how you'd fit it in!

A certain day Sir Black was ill at ease,
And longed to see a "skin you love to touch,"
But such a knight is never long in need,
And providence provided Billy Drews.
He came and with his guber feather beard,
Or pearl-fuzzy whiskers, had the softest chin.
One time Sir Close had ventured to the door,
And found a man a-sitting on the steps,
Whose eyes (the man's I mean and not the steps)
Were gazing at some distant light,
Which no one else around could seem to see,
"And who are you?" Sir Austen shouted out,
"I do not know," a drawling answer came.
"Where are you bound?" Sir Hazard asked him then,
"I do not know," drooled forth the dim reply.
"Where are you from?" Sir Stuart wished to know,
"I do not know," the answer came again.
"The man's resolved in purpose," said the King,
And Carson on the spot was made a knight.
'Twas midnight on a dark and stormy 'eve,
The droning street cars rambled up the street,
When all at once a screech cut through the night,
And set the castle in an awful roar,
The screech it seems was nothing but a laugh,
But still it made the castle shake and quake,
And as the knights rushed out they only found,
A man who laughed with such a mighty roar,
That Leggett nearly lost his new false teeth.
Derisively the man, whose name was Duff,
Was pointing at a funny little man,
Who spluttered so, his face and hair were red,
And who spoke boldly up and said, "He can't!"
"Can't what," Sir Hiester slowly asked at length,
"Can't whip the battling Swede two out of three!"
The little red-faced man whose name was Graves,
Was on the point of starting in to fight,
When lo! a piercing whistle cut the air,
And Potter with his boy scouts saved the night.
And so it came that through this episode,
The three who caused it for their noble deed,
Were all dubbed knights and added to the court.
The argument, howe'er, was hard to solve,
It seemed there was a blonde of stature small,

THE DIAL

Who was the best at Ping-Pong in the world,
And Graves had claimed he couldn't beat a Swede,
Of whom no other knight had ever heard,
The little man was noted for his dress,
Which was immaculate as it could be,
And so the knights rode off one day in quest,
And brought back Sampsell who was made a knight.
Now Sampsell was a bold and nervy knight,
And one day after getting out of jail,
He went a searching out into the world,
To try to find the old man in the moon.
The first adventure on his weary hunt,
Was meeting with a cherub with a ball,
A ball that seemed to be a magic stuff,
For hard as you could throw it at the man,
He'd catch it and would never make a miss,
So Sampsell sent him back to us that night,
And Nicker Smith was added to the clan.
The next he met was one of manner firm,
Who typified the perfect gentleman,
He was a wise man who was widely read,
So Mizener too was made "one of the boys."
The next he came upon a giant was,
Whose stature was so great that little Dave,
The giant's head could only dimly see,
"Who are you?" little Davey meekly asked
"The old man of the moon," boomed the reply.
So here the quest was ended and the two,
Sir Sampsell, and Sir Sargeant wandered home.
McCormick was the leader of a band,
Of soldiers in the far-off town of Rome,
And Hubbard who commands the Latin tongue
Was captured; they came to our castle fine.
Then came Sir Palmer to our table round,
And after this most wondrous Erie "bean,"
Sir Paine was added to the list,
Because he was a merlin at the keys.
A Reading pretzel also came along,
Whose name was Young and he was made a knight.
And as to men of science, gadzooks yea,
We had to have a few of them of course,
So Allison and Heckscher entered in,
Though some say Heckscher entered in by force.

So thus was spent a year of noble deeds,
And many new additions to the court
Were made, and every single one of them.
Were men you speak of as "the better sort."

O gala year, that is the year to come,
In which new members added to the court,
Do number greater than in years before.

THE DIAL

It happened that Sir Hazard changed his mind,
And was a woman-hater never more,
One day as he was searching for the maid,
To be his heroine and beauty fair,
He happened neath an ancient cherry tree.
Now here he calmly stopped for quiet repose,
When lo! the ancient tree did shake and quake,
And cherries dropped around on every side,
Till Newbold was awakened by their fall.
He found two little boys were hard at play,
And that in jumping round about the tree,
They shook the limbs and made the cherries fall.
He spanked the little boys and took them home,
And there they grew to be two noble knights,
Weed Moore and Webb, thus added to the list.
Two little boys were fighting o'er a flask,
Of milk one day when came Sir Moore along,
Who took it from them, drank it, brought them home,
And Keery and Hap Collins entered in.
Now Collins came to be the village sot,
And never sad or doleful seemed to be,
But Keery was to bear a mighty mind,
And study with a diligence and care,
For just this fall he went away and hid,
To study down at Master Sheppard's house.
And also Webb became a studious lad,
And even now is in study secluded.
Then came the great and wondrous noble Swede,
With Ping-Pong paddle and a News in hand,
He laughed a mighty laugh, and loudly said,
"Well boys I guess I'll join your little band!"
This was the unknown Swede of whom we heard,
From Graves when Sampsell came two years before,
And so without a moment of delay,
That Hanson man was added to the court.
Sir Hanson started off immediately
For many noble knightly deeds to do,
And straight away he had a vision queer.
A man of stocky and well-rounded build,
Was standing right before him in the air,
And at his side there was a comely dame,
Ah passing fair was she, ah passing fair!
He wore a boxing glove on one hand,
And in his other hand a football held.
So all the knights set out upon a quest,
To find the vision of the mighty Swede's.
At last Sir Moore did find the mighty man,
And told him of the goodly knights so bold,
So Cunningham was added to the table,
And came to be a fine and fighting knight.
Now Cunningham brought with him magic news,
Of one who was of foot so very fleet,

THE DIAL

That when an arrow in his way was flown,
It could not catch him, for he was too fleet.
They finally laid a trap for him of speed,
By leaving open wide the castle gates,
For when he saw them opened, in he came,
Because he always hunted for a bore.
He was a noble man, and made a knight,
Old Nurmi Biggs was added to the group.
One night when we were gathered round the fire,
There came to the mead hall a knight in green,
To say that he was stocky would be mild,
For he the broadest was in all the world.
"Ta-daa!" he hollered in a roaring voice,
"And who will bear the meat-axe on his neck?"
"I challenge any here to change me blows."
Sir Biggs spoke up with steady voice and said,
"Let me hit first and I'll cut off your head."
Now he who made the challenge bent his neck,
And waited for the mighty blow to fall.
Sir Biggs swung full and with a goodly aim,
He brought the axe down squarely on his neck.
Now sing a sad, now sing a mournful song,
For in a thousand pieces flew the axe.
The Green Knight turned to Biggs and said,
"Come to the seventh green this coming spring,
And I will have a wallop for your neck."
Sir Biggs set out to find the seventh green,
In darkest night, so none would know he left,
And was surprised to find a little man,
Who too was out that night as usual.
The little man told him the way to go,
And for his aid Biggs had him made a knight,
So Ulman made another for the court.
Another little man who served him beer,
And moaned because he hadn't a mint julep,
He sent back to the castle as a knight,
And Johnston was a member of the court,
Sir Biggs at last when he had wandered months,
Came out before the Chapel of the Green,
And there he met the good soul Pious Tom,
So Moore, became the sturdiest of knights,
He also found Sir Sambo Beeson Meed,
A-gambling on the edges of the green,
And with Sir Galahad (or Billy) Hutton,
He sent him back, and both were dubbed good knights.
As to the mighty wallop of the axe.
The Green knight said to laugh it gaily off,
And he came back with Biggs to join the court,
So Mestres now is numbered in the crew,
Now once Sir Andrews hunting for a deed,
Came forth to meet three funny little men,
Whose names were Beevan Pearson, Klauder, Mangan,

THE DIAL

And Beevan with his great preponderous brain,
Convinced Sir Andrews they should join the court,
So Andrews brought them back into this place.
Then came a man named Miner to our midst,
And lately has he been of utmost use,
For I indite this chronicle on his pad
Of paper which he just now lent to me.
Came also in this year the great McChesney,
Who in basketball has made his fame,
And Messimer the quiet little lad,
(You see him only every week or two)
And Scott the lady-killer wandered in,
And quickly started in at writing screeds.
Of Captain Pitty Boy, I needn't speak,
All knights have felt his presence on the hall,
And Grubbs, whom everybody knows full well,
And Fitchen with his fiddle, and that's all.

So Hartley and the nobles of the court;
Had safely sailed across another year,
Although they did have troubles up in East,
Where smoke had issued forth, but never fear,
It all came out all right at that, and so
Again I'll throw the buggy into gear.

The year of twenty-five was hard and long,
With very few additions to the court,
But cider in the country had a kick,
Which helped the gloom along a little bit.

Sir Sargeant wandered out one sunny day
To save some fair-haired beauty in distress,
From snake or dragon, as the case may be,
And almost murdered Scott who was the snake.
But this was only part of that day's work,
He met a man whose cap was o'er his ears,
And who was tuff as any that you've seen,
With one black eye, but otherwise intact.
"I guess you'se guys tink dat your joint is swell,"
"Well you'se can do a muff dive fer the wall,"
"I'll come and look you's over though," he said,
And when he got here liked the crowd so well,
That he remained with us, and so it came,
MacAlister was added to the gents.
The little boy that always has the board
And charcoal in his hands, came in as well,
And now we all have portraits of ourselves,
Since Plummer is a member of the clique.
Another day the old court jester, Duff,
Went out upon a long and noble quest,
A-hunting for the loving cup, until

THE DIAL

He found it, we now have it in our midst,
A mighty god of music, "Orpheus,"
"That Kohlsaas boy," who plays at basketball.
There lived a hermit in a distant hill,
Whose thoughts were even of another world,
Whose nose was ever buried in a book,
Unless his pen was busy writing verse,
Or something else not quite as bad as this,
But even he had heard the wondrous tales,
Of Hartley's goodly knight's, and so it came,
That "Hobe" the Stocking boy is counted in.
A portly round old squire came tumbling in
And shook the goodly castle up and down,
Then when it settled down, he calmly said,
"If any of you guys have got a grudge,
"I would be glad to meet the same outside,
"And settle it with him," but this round man,
Was such a cute and foolish little duke,
That all decided that he should be a knight,
And Rollinson was listed in the book.
There came along a mighty man of brawn,
Whose attitude was harmless and demure
And who was always right and never wrong,
And always did converse with subtle wit,
An alchemist, who was admitted in,
And so you've met Van Bibber (Lord) Quereau,
O sing a glad, O sing a happy song!
The greatest of them all was to due to come,
A man who came from out the great Northwest,
Whose stories were the best we ever heard.
At times we almost thought (though we were wrong),
That they were false, but surely they were good.
Since then with stories we abolish care,
All thanks to Effinger, the "thpitting" fool.
Another goodly man has had his part,
His name is Hill, and there you have the year.

Alas this chronicler is growing old,
'Tis almost time for him to yield the pen,
And never more to list the deeds so bold,
Of good king Hartley and his mighty men.

The year thus far has drifted by in peace
With few additions to our noble men,
But still we drew a wonder from the south,
Who sings a pretty song to the guitar.
This Texan is a bold and mighty knight,
Sir Kendall helps the time along with song.
We found another walking "On the road,"
And Fleming's name was annexed to list.
In Elliott we found another still,
And lastly came the mighty man of brain,
Sir Chittenden, but time and space do press.

Under the practically faultless leadership of an excellent committee, the Form has weathered the storms of many doubtful situations which have naturally risen in the past two years. Without the slightest doubt, the Form will carry on the standard as bravely and as virtuously as it has in the past, and the future can not help but appear bright and promising, and will most certainly hold in it the fulfillment of the highest aspirations.

History of the Class of 1928

OFFICERS

WILLIAM HYDE..... President

FREDERICK McKECHNIE..... Vice-President

SEWALL D. ANDREWS..... Secretary-Treasurer

Upon the election of officers, the class entered its first year as an organized group. Its colors, red and blue, were chosen, and committees to encourage extra-curriculum activities and scholarships were appointed, which is a new step for Fourth Forms. As the result of the winter term elections, Crimmins was President, Hyde Vice-President, and Swinehart Secretary and Treasurer.

During the 1925 football season, the form was represented by Biddulph and Crimmins, who won their letters, and Dodge, Hirst, and Betner, who were awarded A. H. A.'s. Velie and Freeman were on the soccer squad, while the Form had Fitch, Biddulph, Hyde, and Crimmins on the basketball squad. In track McKechnie won his letter during the 1925 season. On the golf team both Wilson and Swinehart held positions.

The Form had many fellows in the musical clubs, especially the Mandolin Club, of which S. Andrews, L. E. Thomas, Paterson, Wofford, C. L. Smith, Streeter, Yuengling, Prettyman, Griffin, Jenks and Kingsbury are members. The band has Hebard, Streeter, Foster, Taylor, H. Sanford, S. Andrews, May and Paterson. In the orchestra are Wofford, May, J. G. Taylor, Streeter, and Hebard, Smith, Streeter, and Paterson are in the Jazz Orchestra, while Wofford and Biddulph are in the Glee Club.

Mark Cresap is on both the News and Record boards.

The Form does not hope to succeed by the strength of any individual or group of individuals, but by the combined effort of all, thus giving all we have to and for the Hill.

History of the School

DEVOUT, austere, New Englander, Matthew Meigs, wearied of his duties as president of Delaware College, came to Pottstown in 1851 for the avowed purpose of founding a small institution where he might instill into his own boys the rudiments of education and the qualities of a man.

At that time Mrs. Meigs' sister, Rebecca, with her husband, the Reverend W. R. Work, were conducting the "Cottage Seminary," a school for girls, in the little Pennsylvanian town. At the summit of a short, abrupt hill overlooking the Seminary there was an old stone mansion, surrounded by trees, which Dr. Meigs bought for his family. Some of his students at Delaware having expressed a desire to continue under his tutelage, a wing was added to the original dwelling. The only other buildings on the gently undulating grounds were a barn, outfitted with the customary farming implements, and a stable. The stable assumed a double rôle, for it also served as a gymnasium. To be sure, it was not very complete, having only a trapeze and parallel bars, yet it was the forerunner of the present structure.

Though the school's physical equipment was crude, from an intellectual standpoint it was magnificently endowed. Matthew Meigs was a remarkable scholar. He not only was thoroughly familiar with mathematics, but he also was well versed in Greek, Latin, and modern languages. Moreover, he was familiar with Hebrew and Sanskrit. Dr. Meigs was such an unusually learned man that he had small regard for the lesser intellectual capacity of his students, with the result that his sternness and exact discipline had an awesome effect upon their spirits, though all admired his own attainments.

So irksome did the listless routine of the school become to Dr. Meigs, that he devoted his entire time to his books, leaving the school in the hands of subordinates. Under the new regime the school declined rapidly both in efficiency and numbers.

The 31st day of August, however, in 1852, John Meigs, the future leader of The Hill, was born. Under his father's stern discipline, John rapidly developed into an accomplished student. So proficient, indeed, did he become that, at the age of fourteen he entered Lafayette College. He graduated with honors in 1871, and returned to The Hill as instructor. In a year, however, he was back at Lafayette, and when he left permanently, in 1876, to resume his duties at The Hill, it was with the degree of Doctor of Philosophy.

Meanwhile, the School was in a rather run-down condition. Dr. Meigs was often in Europe for long intervals, while his son, George Meigs, to whom the School was then intrusted, was ill. To John Meigs, The Hill now turned.

THE DIAL

The "Professor," as he was called to distinguish him from his father, labored incessantly to elevate the standard of the School. Not content to arrange the pecuniary details, he taught as many classes as the three other men who, with himself, composed the faculty, besides making the boys' reports, attending to lapses of discipline, and directing the daily schedule of the teachers.

His remarkable ability as a professor, for he was no less a student than his father, soon earned him a sterling reputation, so that by 1883, only seven years after he had taken charge of The Hill, the number of students had risen to sixty, whereas the original number was but twelve. In spite of this steady growth, no new buildings were made, save a gymnasium, which was constructed at right angles to the original school building.

It was here that, during the bitter winter of 1884, a deadly fire started. John Meigs heroically faced the situation. Though the loss was severe, school continued in the long unused Girls' Seminary and another residence nearby. The commencement exercises in June were held in a new gymnasium, and in the following September a new building was erected upon the enlarged foundations of the old. This new structure, besides being the first among American educational institutions, to innovate electrically lighted rooms, was the first to have fully equipped bathrooms and steam heat, and was the first in which each room had both hot and cold running water.

After the School was once more firmly established, the "Professor" made a trip to Europe. In the summer of 1890, three years after his return to The Hill, another fire, even more devastating than its predecessor, reduced all but the walls of the original stone building to a mass of charred ruins. The débris was soon cleared away by numerous workmen, toiling night and day under the glare of arc lights. Indeed, so rapidly was the work completed that the fall term was able to open on the scheduled time. The new buildings were a great improvement. Back of the restored master's house, situated on the crest of the hill, a three-storied structure, later covered with vines, was erected. At its extremity, forming a right angle with, ran another. Its first floor was utilized as a gymnasium; the second, as a schoolroom. Directly facing the dining-room and headmaster's house, and forming the third side of the quadrangle, the "Sixth Form Wing," as it was then called, was built. On the first floor of this most recent addition a general reading-room and also a library opened on a cloistered arcade. East of the schoolroom, and sixty-odd yards away, was a building entitled the "Cottage," which was once Matthew Meigs's residence, but was then used by the Underformers. Parallel to the expansion of the buildings was the growth of students. One hundred boys could be taken in 1890, and in a decade two hundred and twenty-five more could be accommodated.

THE DIAL

In 1900 the "East Wing" had been built, only to be burned a year later. It so fulfilled John Meigs' aspirations, however, that it was soon after almost precisely duplicated. Meanwhile, a movement had long been under way to raise funds for the construction of a chapel as a remembrance from the alumni. Accordingly, in 1904, the chapel was dedicated. It is situated just beyond the corner of the West Wing, and is at right angles to it. Its architecture, plain and massive, is nevertheless of a beautiful Gothic style. Beside the small southern entrance there is another under a gracefully arched cloister, facing toward the east, at whose end rises an octagonal tower. Within, its brick and limestone walls are lighted by wide lancet windows on the floor level and by the clerestory above. One other building, the present Upper School, was to mark the climax of John Meigs' constructive work.

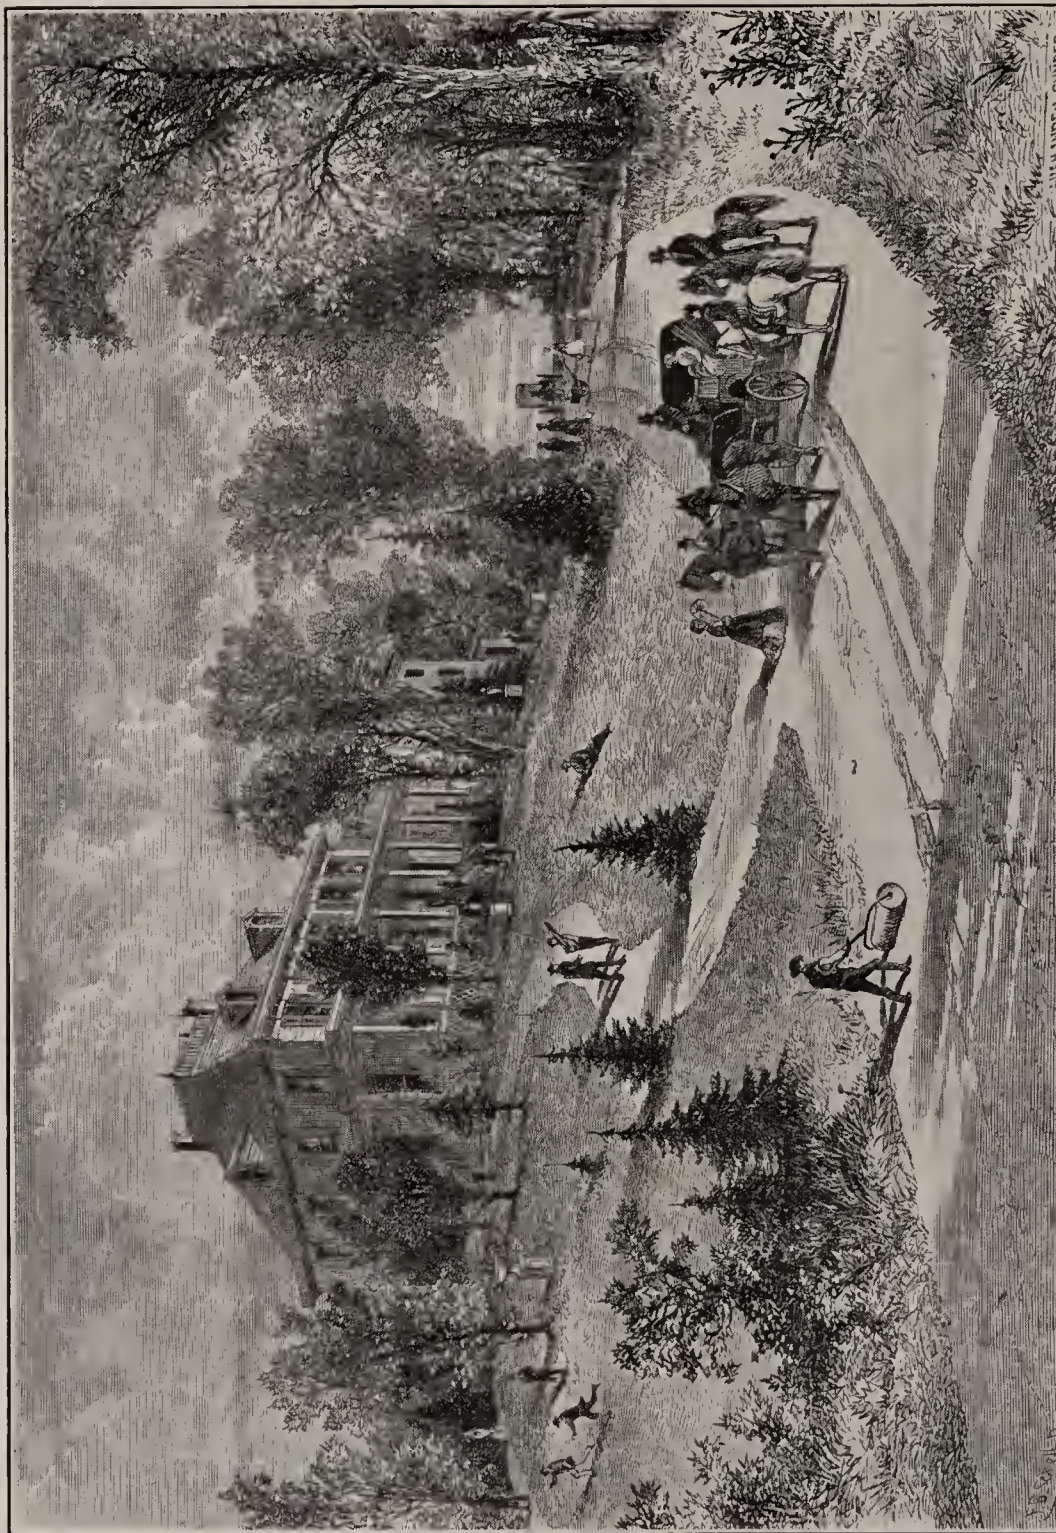

Meanwhile the property had been steadily enlarged, until it consisted of slightly upwards of 120 acres, many of which were devoted to athletic fields.

Soon after John Meigs, suffering from heart disease, went to Europe to find relief. Meanwhile, the School was in charge of a committee of experienced masters. On his return, John Meigs resumed command, but on the sixth day of November, 1911, he died.

On John Meigs' death, Mr. Rolfe became Acting Headmaster, and Headmaster in 1913, remaining in that capacity for another year, when Dwight R. Meigs, the son of John Meigs, took charge. During his régime the most notable events were the building of the beautiful Dining Hall, the laying-out of the golf course, the completion of the infirmary, and the gradually progressing work on Memorial Hall. From 372 boys and 38 masters in 1914, the School increased to 392 boys and 46 masters in 1922, when Dr. Boyd Edwards was appointed leader of The Hill.

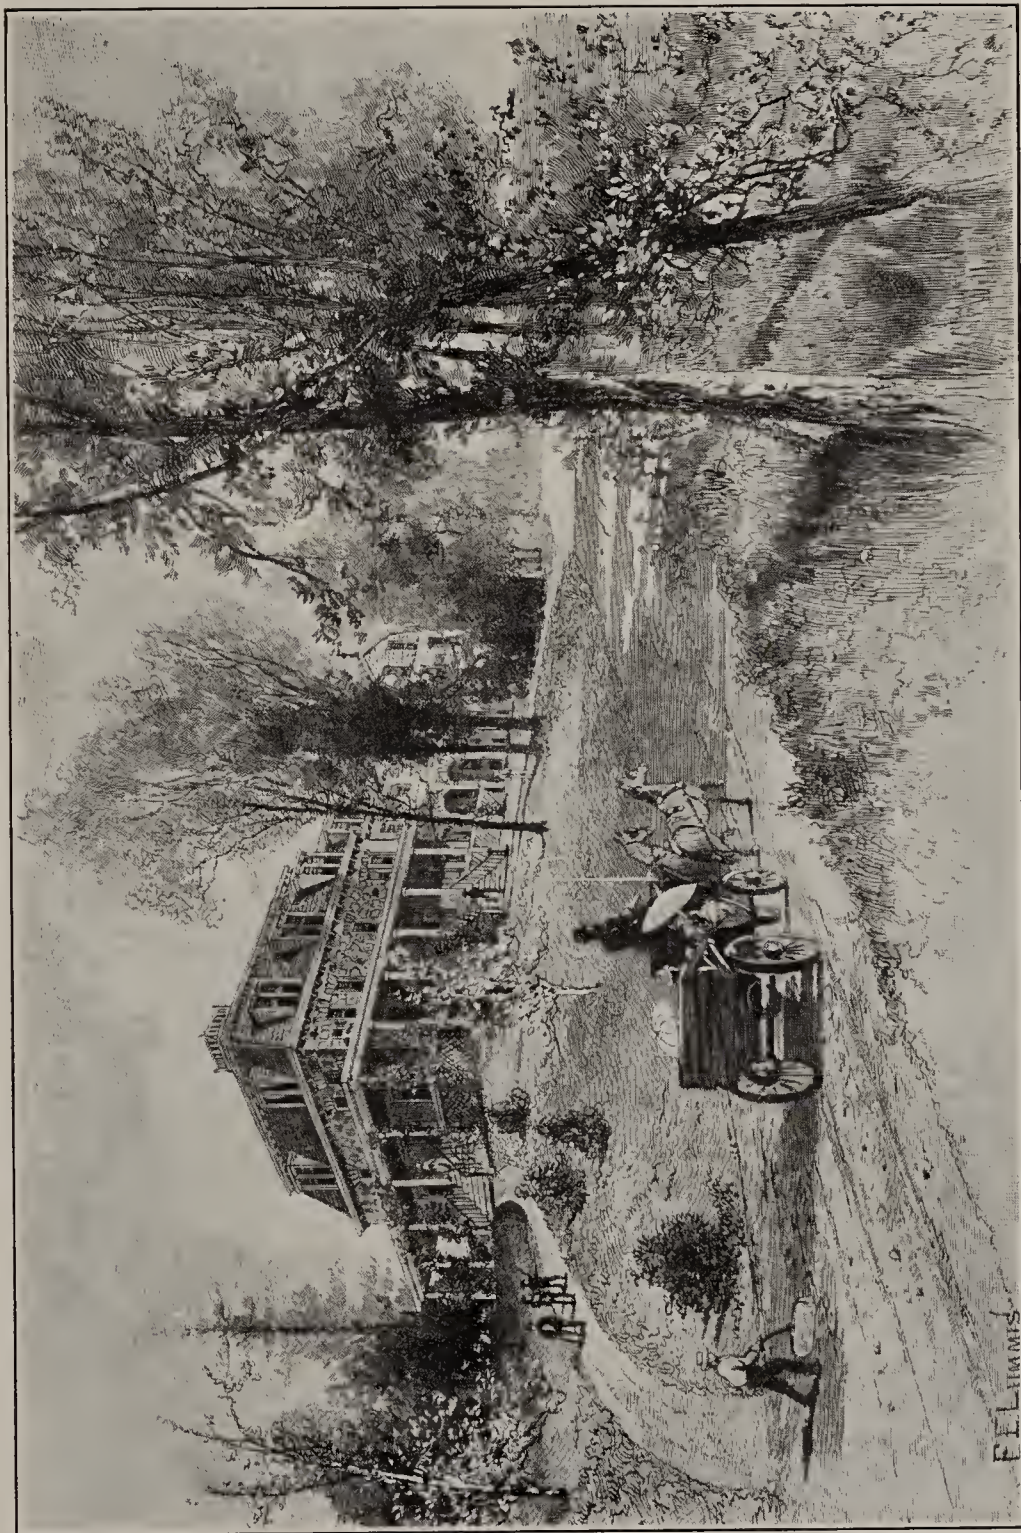

Meanwhile, Memorial Hall was being completed. The building, of late Gothic architecture, is situated on the opposite side of the Alumni Chapel, thus forming the fourth side of the campus quadrangle. Its shape is that of a capital "I". In the South Wing is the Memorial Room, the light from a large bay window falling on a bronze tablet dedicated to Hill boys who fell in the war. The North Wing is devoted to the offices of the publications and the stage, while in between the two is the Auditorium, seating 580 students. Directly above the Auditorium is the Library, a beautiful and spacious room, stocked with excellent books, and dedicated to William Scheerer.

And now, though no material additions have been made during Dr. Edwards' administration, the School morale is higher than ever before, and much has been done to make "our high honor higher still."

Review of the 1925 Football Season

WITH five letter men and some thirty-five other candidates on hand, football practice began under the leadership of Captain Cunningham. Save for the veterans, the material was largely inexperienced, and great credit is due the coaches, Mr. Ward, Mr. Sweeney, Mr. Denman, and Mr. Kempton, for turning out the team they did. An indomitable spirit and a willingness to sacrifice marked the squad's efforts, and they should be commended regardless of their record.

The first game of the season, October 3rd, was played with Franklin and Marshall, and resulted in a 7—7 tie. The features of the game were F. and M's aerial attack and The Hill's strong line. The Hill drew first blood when Cunningham completed a pass to Hamill, who raced twenty-five yards for a touchdown, but Franklin and Marshall evened the score in the third period when they succeeded in crossing the goal line.

In the second game, October 10th, The Hill failed to show any marked improvement, and was held to a 6—6 tie by the strong West Philadelphia team. Neither team showed a strong offensive and the game early became a kicking contest. The first quarter passed without scoring, but late in the second quarter Cunningham intercepted a forward pass and ran forty-five yards for a touchdown. After a series of breaks in the third quarter, West Philadelphia obtained the ball on The Hill's eight yard line, and carried it over by three line plunges. The game brought out little of importance except the lack of a strong offensive.

In the third game of the season played at Port Deposit on October 17th, a faster and more experienced Hill team was held to a scoreless tie by Tome School. Only the lack of a final drive in crucial moments prevented The Hill team from being victorious. Immediately after the first whistle blew, the Hill started on what appeared to be a successful drive for a touchdown, but was held on the five-yard line. Again in the second quarter The Hill threatened the Tome goal unsuccessfully, but after that attempt the teams played a more equal brand of football. The Hill opened up a desperate aerial attack in the closing minutes of play, but to no avail. After a long run by Cunningham the game ended.

Battling in a sea of mud and in a pouring rain, The Hill football team met its first defeat of the season 6—0 at the hands of the Lawrenceville eleven on the Dell Field, October 24th. Late in the first quarter the Lawrenceville team scored a touchdown on a forward pass, after they had recovered a fumble on The Hill fourteen yard line. Due to the rain, which had covered the field with mud, neither eleven had a chance to show its best form, and the game developed into a kicking duel between Cunningham and Schenk. Throughout the entire game both teams fumbled frequently, making the score uncertain until the final whistle. Schenk and Bardwell were the outstanding stars for Lawrenceville, while Cunningham and Heagney shone for The Hill.

Showing superior qualities in every department of the game, The Hill completely outclassed the Williamson Trade School eleven in their annual game on October 31st. The final score was 13—0. Ludlum of The Hill scored the first points of the game when, in the first quarter, he caught a punt and ran through the entire Williamson team for a touchdown. In the next period The Hill scored again when Hamill carried the ball over for the second touchdown. It was a well-deserved victory.

The Hill Team went down to defeat for the second time when the Gilman Country Day School earned a 7—0 victory on a rain-soaked field. A costly fumble early in the first quarter was scooped up by Scarlett, the individual star for Gilman, and he raced sixty-five yards for the winning touchdown.

The Blue and White of Hotchkiss scored a triumphant victory over The Hill on the afternoon of November 13th. A touchdown by Lowry, Hotchkiss quarterback, late in the third period and a drop-kick by Reinmund early in the final quarter provided the margin of victory for the Lakeville eleven. During the first quarter Hotchkiss was completely outplayed and the battle was, for the most part, carried on in their territory. The tables turned, however, in the second period, and Hotchkiss as a result of a poor punt by The Hill and two long forward passes, took the ball to The Hill's eight-yard line. The Hill line tightened, Hotchkiss lost the ball on downs, and Cunningham kicked out of danger. A fumble in the fourth quarter prevented The Hill from scoring the winning touchdown. After having successfully carried the ball across for a goal, they swept down the field in what appeared to be a victorious march, but a fumble proved costly and Hotchkiss gained possession of the ball.

The Hill team was not made up of individual stars, but was rather the result of team work. Captain Cunningham, Hamill, and Heagny, however, proved to be the mainstays of The Hill efforts.

Review of 1925 Track Season

UNDER the leadership of Captain McLallen, The Hill Track Team carried itself through the season with honors. The coaches, Messrs. Colbath, Sweeney and Wendell, turned out a polished team which captured a victorious season by defeating Lawrenceville $63\frac{1}{2}-62\frac{1}{2}$. A remarkable feat was accomplished in the first meet held at Newark, N. J., in which The Hill was represented by only three men, Schurman, James Walker and Wildman. These three gathered among themselves ten points, tying with New Utrecht High School for first place, and winning the silver cup by a toss of the coin. At the Penn Carnival, the quarter-mile relay was barely nosed out by Mercersburg for the championship of America, the winners covering the course in only one-fifth of a second better time than The Hill team. The medley one-and-a-quarter-mile relay team was the victim of hard luck, as a member dropped the baton at the start, and therefore the quartet could place no better than fourth.

The next week the Princeton Freshmen overwhelmed the school 96-30, exhibiting superior skill in every event. At the annual Princeton Interscholastics The Hill finished second, following Mercersburg; but at New Haven the school scored a splendid victory, beating Lawrenceville, Roxbury, Berkshire and many others. The Yale Freshmen visited the school and went back victorious by the score of 76-50.

Finally came the Lawrenceville meet which the Blue and Gray won after the closest battle in twenty-three years, the score being $63\frac{1}{2}-62\frac{1}{2}$.

Captain McLallen's work at the pole-vault was one of the shining lights of the season, while the star group of runners—James Walker, Schurman, McKechnie, Biggs, Davies, and Peters—with Hugh Kaul in the high-jump, earned many much-needed points for the school.

Review of 1925 Baseball Season

NASMUCH as only two letter men were on the squad, the 1925 Baseball Team was not as promising as in former years. In spite of this handicap, however, under the able leadership of Captain Jasper and the excellent coaching of Mr. Robins, a team worthy of The Hill was developed. Lawrenceville was one of the more important teams which were defeated.

In the first game of the season the Pottstown Athletic Club, by virtue of an excellent pitcher, good fielding, and heavy hitting, defeated The Hill by a score of 11-0.

On Saturday, April 11th, The Hill team defeated Chestnut Hill, 10-5.

The game with Pottstown High was forfeited to The Hill in the eighth inning, when the visitors withdrew their team from the field.

The excellent pitching of Minks gave the Allentown Prep. Team a 10-3 victory over the Blue and Gray on Saturday, April 18th. Binns' fielding for The Hill was a feature of the game.

The Hill lost to the strong Princeton Prep. Team on April 25th, with a score of 8 to 5. Worth, pitcher for Princeton Prep., hit a home run and also had twelve strike-outs to his credit.

On April 29th The Hill suffered an unusual defeat at the hands of Ursinus Reserves by a score of 22-21. The Hill brought in eleven runs in the eighth inning.

Jasper's steady pitching gave The Hill nine an 11 to 9 victory over the Princeton Junior Varsity on Friday, May 1st.

The Tome Team defeated The Hill at Port Deposit on May 9th. The game throughout was a pitchers' battle, with a final score of 4-2. Jasper was the mainstay of the visitors.

By gaining an early lead, the West Philadelphia High School Team defeated The Hill on Wednesday, May 13th, by a score of 11-4. Both nines played well, but The Hill batters had difficulty in hitting the opposing pitcher.

The Hill defeated Lawrenceville in the annual game played at Pottstown on May 16th. Due to Jasper's excellent pitching, The Hill Team won a 4-3 victory. The game was a pitchers' battle, and it was not until the eighth inning that The Hill scored the winning run on a single by Cox. Both Jasper and Robinson pitched fine ball throughout the entire game, the former allowing only one clean hit and three scratch safeties.

A base on balls, followed by a three-base hit, spelled a 2-1 defeat for The Hill on Saturday, May 23d, in the game with the Gilman Country School at Roland Park, Maryland.

In the final game of the season, The Hill was defeated by Hotchkiss by a score of 6-1. Jasper and Rudd each pitched well, but three home runs by the Lakeville players assured a certain victory.

Review of the 1926 Basketball Season

ASKETBALL at The Hill is becoming more and more important each year, but even so, has far from reached its destined peak. Probably the 1926 season has, more than any other year, shown the increasing interest taken in the game, and the defeat of Lawrenceville should prove a stimulus to even greater enthusiasm in the 1927 season.

Great credit must be given to Mr. Denman, who developed a team from material which was greatly weakened by the absence of Captain Mead, Binns, and Firestone, and to Kohlsaatt, who so ably took over the captaincy after the illness and consequent withdrawal of Mead.

Although only three of the scheduled games were won, these three victories included the one over Lawrenceville, which in itself would make a season to be proud of. In addition to this must be considered the spirit which the team as a whole displayed—The Hill School spirit, than which none can be finer.

In the first game of the season, played a scant few days after the opening of the Winter Term, The Hill completely outclassed the Feroe Press team, the final score being 44-16.

The next four games were less fortunate. On January 16, the Franklin and Marshall Academy team defeated The Hill, 52-31.

One week later, The Hill was again defeated, this time by the Princeton Freshmen, with a score of 41-26.

On January 30, The Hill lost to West Philadelphia High School. The final score, 37-29, does not indicate the equality of the two teams. The game was hotly contested throughout, and the result was in doubt until the last few minutes of play.

The University of Pennsylvania Freshmen team was exceptionally strong. It had won all of its games before that with The Hill, and had the record of a point a minute at least, in each game. The Hill team fought hard and well the first half, and equalled the visiting team in score and fight, but the Freshmen gained by leaps and bounds in the second half and emerged the victors by a decisive score.

Two weeks later, on February 20, The Hill team, showing marked improvement, defeated Ursinus 48-26.

In the last game of the season, played against Lawrenceville on February 27, The Hill was again victorious. The game was hotly and fiercely fought from the first whistle to the last, and was probably the best of the season.

Review of the 1925 Soccer Season

THE Soccer Team had a fairly successful season, and Soccer is now a recognized sport at The Hill. All praise is due to the members of the team and squad for their untiring efforts and fighting spirit. Because of this spirit and perseverance Soccer is even more firmly entrenched in The Hill than it was last year. The team suffered several setbacks, but showed fine spirit in overcoming these difficulties, and its standard will be a difficult one to live up to.

In the first game of the season, played against Kennett Square High School, The Hill was defeated by the narrow margin of one goal, the final score being 2—1. Kennett Square presented a well-coached and smooth-working machine but despite The Hill team's lack of experience had a difficult time in scoring the winning goal. The Hill played a superior brand of Soccer during the first half, weakening during the last part of the game. The ball was carried from one end of the field to the other, but inaccurate shooting and a defense of the highest calibre made it difficult for either team to score.

The second game of the season was lost to the George School, champions of the Philadelphia district and undoubtedly one of the strongest teams in the country. The visitors presented a well-coached team of veterans and gave a wonderful exhibition of passing and shooting, forcing the ball into The Hill's territory continually. The Hill was handicapped by Brownell's absence, due to injuries. Throughout the entire game The Hill was on the defensive, penetrating George School's defense only twice, and then not scoring. George School tallied three times in each half, all beautiful shots, and the game ended 6—0 in favor of the visitors.

The Hill suffered its third defeat at the hands of the strong University of Pennsylvania Freshman aggregation. Effinger was the outstanding star for The Hill, breaking up many of Penn's attacks, and always backing up The Hill forward line. Truitt scored the first tally for Penn. The Hill threatened Penn's goal for several minutes, but was finally repulsed, and Truitt scored once again for Penn. After the kick-off Greenway scored for the visitors. During the second half the ball remained more in Penn's territory and was not taken from one end of the field to the other so often. Azue, of Penn took the ball and, dribbling down the field, scored on a beautiful left-foot kick. The Penn players again took the ball and Truitt scored. Shortly after the kick-off Azua scored his second goal for Penn, and then Brownell, receiving a kick from McCormick, on left wing, scored The Hill's single tally. The final whistle blew after a short scrimmage, and the game ended 6—1 in favor of Pennsylvania Freshmen.

In the final game of the season The Hill Team showed a marked improvement, and it was with difficulty that West Philadelphia High School defeated them 5—2. Although played on a rain-soaked field in a driving storm, it was a close and well-fought game. Pools of water and mud deadened the ball, and made accurate shooting almost impossible. For the first time in the season The Hill forwards played an aggressive game, and stayed well in the opponents territory almost all the time. They passed and dribbled the ball with splendid form and accuracy. Brownell played a fine brand of Soccer, scoring The Hill's two tallies, and continually threatening the opponents goal.

Review of 1925 Golf Season

DURING the past year golf at The Hill has been organized into a leading minor sport. The prospects for the ensuing term are most promising with Dunlap, Wilson, Palmer, Swinehart, and A. White returning next year.

The painstaking work of Mr. Fraser has brought about this exceptional aggregation of players.

Last Spring Term after a fair average of dual victories, the Hill team journeyed to the Apawamis links at Rye, New York, to compete in the Eastern Preparatory School Interscholastics. George T. Dunlap, of Pinehurst, N. C., upheld the honor of the School by qualifying third with a score of 76-79—155 and carrying Eugene Homans, of Choate, the medalist, to the nineteenth before he succumbed. Homans sunk a twenty-seven foot putt to win the match from Dunlap. The Homans-Dunlap match was the feature one of the day, and The Hill golfer nearly made the old jinx of golf live up to its medalist-killing tradition. The plucky Dunlap was two up during the journey with Homans until he reached the eleventh, when the fates began to turn their whimsical favoritism toward the Choate lad. By virtue of running down several long putts and barely escaping a water hazard, Homans finally got the lead at the fifteenth. From here until the finish of the match, to quote The New York Times: "the plucky little Hill School golfer—a mere mite of a lad with a giant's swing and a splendid competitive temperament—clung on like a leech. The more that Homans shook, the tighter Dunlap clung on. He was a beaten boy on the sixteenth, but refused to admit it, and got his half there and then won the home hole when his opponent flubbed his approach.

"Playing to the deciding hole, he was short of the green on his second, while Homans' ball, hit a trifle too hard, plumped on the soft green. Dunlap's chip was practically dead for a four, when Homans sank his long putt for a birdie three, the hole and the match."

Captain Dunlap made even a better showing during the Christmas Holidays at Pinehurst, N. C. Having two years previously won the Junior Championship, he entered the senior drawings, fought his way against odds, and won the Midwinter Pinehurst Tournament. The Junior Championship was won by A. White.

During the Fall Term the Hill team lost its only two matches to Tome and Lawrenceville. In one meet Captain Dunlap was absent, due to illness. Against Tome the Hill team was Swinehart, No. 1; Wilson, No. 2; Sargeant, No. 3; Palmer, No. 4. Sargeant was the only Blue and Gray point scorer, his long driving and steady golf producing an 81.

Against Lawrenceville the visitors obtained eight points to the home team's four. Dunlap checked Ryan two up, while Sargeant succeeded in holding the Lawrenceville No. 1 player to a tie match. The other two Hill representatives were easily defeated.

Review of 1925 Tennis Season

ALTHOUGH the tennis team lost four and won four matches, the team carried out a very difficult schedule with great credit. Under the leadership of the coach and the captain it fought hard in every case and gave a good account of itself even in defeat.

The season opened with a one-sided victory over The Brookside Country Club. The team consisting of Pitman, Cage, Thomas and Hanson played in the same order throughout the season.

On April 22nd The Hill defeated the strong U. of P. Freshmen 4—2. All matches were hard fought and the final issue was in doubt until the last point was over.

On April 25th the Penn. A. C. sent up Carl Fischer and three other men on the Metropolitan ranking and played an exhibition match with the school team. They won easily as was to be expected.

The Yale Freshmen sent down a team composed of number one men on prep. school teams of the year before and again The Hill was defeated 6—0. Cage playing number two deserved credit for his work in both singles and doubles in this match.

On May 9th, the team traveled to Port Deposit for their only match away. The Tome team with Alphonse Smith as number one barely nosed out The Hill 4—2. Again Cage rendered a good account of himself against Tyler, a one-time protege of Tilden's.

May 13th saw The Hill playing to better advantage. Princeton Prep. lost all singles but the number four match, and as they had to leave the doubles were called making the score 3—1 for The Hill.

Lawrenceville, the "big match" of the season, subdued The Hill 4—2 in the best match of the season. The number one match in both singles and doubles were the only ones The Hill won. Here our number one man played in his top form, and won the singles in three sets and the doubles to the same tune. All the other matches were very close and very well fought. Lawrenceville deserved its victory by coming through in the pinches.

On May 20th The Hill played what was virtually a post season game with Blair. All singles and one doubles match were won by the home players.

As the team attended no interscholastic tournament there is no way of telling how our individual members compare with other school players at large.

Dr. Lester did very creditable work in advice to the men all season.

The Hill School Y. M. C. A.

THE character of a school is determined by the moral tone and spirit of the students. The Hill has always been considered as a high type of American school, and the Young Men's Christian Association here has done a great deal to keep up the tone and spirit of the pupils. This work is accomplished largely through three channels—regular weekly meetings, "open" meetings, and Bible study classes.

This year the policy of the Y. M. C. A. has been to present to the school a well rounded program of speakers, in the hope that every student would be interested in at least one of the many different types of talks. It may be impossible to interest all of the people all of the time, but it is not impossible to interest all of the people some of the time. All of the meetings have been extremely well attended, and such eminent speakers as Mr. McMenamin and Dr. Grafflin attracted the attention of practically the entire student body. Of our own Faculty, Dr. Edwards, Mr. Rolfe, and Mr. Lester spoke with glowing success.

During the Fall Term, an "opinion" meeting was held in the place of an open meeting to ascertain the feeling of the students toward the Y. M. C. A. Criticism was welcomed, and suggestions for future speakers and the betterment of the Y. M. C. A. program were gladly accepted by the officers. This "opinion" meeting proved of great value in determining our policy for this year.

The regular weekly Bible Classes met during the year as usual, under the auspices of the Bible Study Committee. The Y is also carrying on its work at Bethany through the Bethany Committee, and is giving its support to the Student Friendship Fund, the State and National Y work.

The Mission Band Officers

MARK W. CRESAP President
WILLIAM H. HYDE Vice-President
GORDON TAYLOR Secretary and Treasurer

IN THE fall of Nineteen Twenty-five, The Mission Band elected a new set of officers, who had the problem of making The Mission Band a popular organization for Nineteen Twenty-six by upholding the high standard of previous years and especially of the preceding year. A campaign for members was immediately started, but a need for a change in the Band was felt, and the officers, with the ardent co-operation of Mr. Wight, the advisor, devised a radical amendment to the policy of former years. After the permission of the Y. M. C. A. was obtained, it was decided that The Mission Band should supply two Y. M. C. A. speakers during the Winter and Spring terms. The regular Sunday morning meetings were to be continued, however. At the time of writing the first meeting with the Y. M. C. A. has not been held, but we feel sure that it will be a success.

We hope that The Mission Band of '26 has upheld the former high standard of the organization, and we hope that we have inaugurated a new policy that will be continued. If we have done anything that is worth while recording on the list of accomplishments on the long roster of Mission Bands dating from years back, we have no one to thank but Mr. Wight, whose untiring interest and gracious work in obtaining speakers and otherwise aiding us, are mostly responsible for this.

Review of the Dramatic Club

HIDDEN beneath the dignified exteriors of many prosaic and commonplace mortals lies another self-treasured, secluded inner being, who becomes a familiar companion of the lone hours when we are removed from the eyes of the critical world. This other self belittles our common sense, derides our petty ambitions, and sneers at our ordinary conceptions of relative values. It was the final domination of this other ego which caused Strickland, in Maughan's "Moon and Sixpence," to break loose from the evils of convention and the charms of the commonplace and find a new life—the life of romance and adventure, which he thought essential if his soul were to breathe freely.

It is scarcely necessary for the most of us to take a step so radical as his in order to be thrilled, and to experience the exhilaration following the divine afflatus. The play presented last May by the Dramatic Club depicts the effect of the suppressed desire for romance, whim, and adventure, on the life of the ordinary humdrum individual.

"Captain Applejack," by Walter Hackett, is a play which deals with an attractive but spoiled young man, one Ambrose Applejohn, who, having lived far too long in a rut, and having been inspired by his friend Jason, suddenly startles his prim Aunt Agatha and his devoted ward, Poppy, by an unexpected show of spirit. He craves adventure, deeds of daring, romance, and is accommodated almost immediately by the arrival of a much pursued Russian dancer, her Russian pursuer, and a seer and his wife. Exhausted by the strain of so much unwonted excitement, Applejohn falls asleep in his chair. His dream follows, a dream in which he is a roistering, swaggering pirate, one Captain Applejack. In a startling succession of knife and wit play, Applejack is easily the superior in courage and mental dexterity of all about him.

His awakening in his own library in his accustomed chair finds him rather bated with adventure and color, but romance awaits him in the person of the devoted Poppy, and "pirate gold," in the form of treasure concealed behind the long-neglected panel. The villains are foiled, order restored; Jason, who inspired the "wanderlust," explains himself, and all ends happily.

The part of Applejohn, a very difficult one because of its dual requirements, was excellently done by Joseph Kahrs. In the first and last acts he gave a very intelligent portrayal of the timid, retiring householder, and in the second act delighted his audience by an entirely changed manner as the swaggering, blustering pirate captain.

Baker, as Anna Valeska, the languorous and seductive Russian dancer, interpreted a difficult role very satisfactorily. His change of diction, from the soft notes of an aristocrat to the crisp tones of an adventuress, was particularly well done. The role of Poppy, which also required intelligent handling, lost nothing from the natural and understanding manner in which Scott played it. Boralsky, the Russian spy, as played by Forman, was a suave, dignified, and impressive character.

Schwarz, as the butler, gave a perfect characterization as usual. His particular forte lies in character parts. Cresap, in the role of Aunt Agatha, was much at ease in manner and diction. Jones played the dashing Mrs. Penguard and was easily the beauty of the evening. Ludlum and Sargeant each played their dual parts exceptionally well, as did Fitch, in the role of Jason, and also that of a pirate. The pirate crew was every effectively played by English, Bird, Lappe, McNally, Bull, Sargeant, and Collins.

The entire production from the standpoint of both staging and directing was beyond criticism. Mr. Conley deserves a great deal of praise and credit for making it a success.

ROMAN SCENE IN THE SIXTH FORM SHOW

Review of the Sixth Form Show

IT IS being whispered by some who fear the hovering shades of former Sixth Form Shows, that this Thanksgiving Day's performance was, if not the best on record, at least the best within memory of those present. The foregoing is also being shouted by some intrepid spirits, who have forgotten the shades. Whatever were the show's good points, at least the bad ones were not noticeable beyond the first four rows, and all who know about the workings of such things will join us in giving Mr. Conley our congratulations in surpassing his previous successes by a very large margin. The ingenuity of a man who can get up shows year after year, each better than the last, and crowning his latest with a Latin tragedy, is a genus of hitherto unrecognized variety.

Being immediately put at our ease by the first number, which, had a program been issued, should have been called The Boarding House Blues, we were able, quite to our surprise, to forget our duties as reporter, and enjoy the show in its entirety. The Hill version of Is Zat So? was a decided happy success. Only men who had slushed their parts among the people whose dialect they used could hope to give a rendition so true to life. Second only to the plumbers as actor was Mr. I. Caesar Cromwell, the gentleman of the fiery eyes and the phonographic mouth. He and his various partners in crime succeeded in doing the impossible, singing and playing in times with each other and in harmony with the spectators. Big Bimbo Binns came out, let his limbs go in their normal fashion and left Pottstown immediately to rejoin his tour under Mr. Keith's direction. The coy Susanela, her lisping lover, Tony, and his hazard with the athletic concertina, all were true to life—their own and others.

Medie and Yellow Ochre must have come direct from Nat Weyburn's hands, for they danced as no humans before. They came, they looked and lo, beneath their burning glances, did their balloons explode. And yet, not content with original anaesthetic dancing, they performed with equal ease upon the piano-forte.

Sophie Meadowgrass and her Uncle Spavins had, like the plumbers, obtained their material at first hand; they were so realistic that you could see the wisps of straw in Mr. Spavins' hair.

The physical culture family showed the influence of Mr. Kogel's paternalistic tyranny. They ate as athletes, even the beautiful Mother; they showed in every line the results of constant exercise.

The interluders having played good music which failed to cover up the noise backstage, the tragedy started. We were tense with anxiety as we heard sounds familiar, and unfamiliar, come towards us. Catalina entered, divided Gaul so many times into three parts that the division must have been nearly accurate historically before the end. The costumes were unusual, the language more so.

One word more; may the reviewer thank 1926 for its song, which is tuneful and not too mournful. The composer and the lyricist are to be congratulated.

The News Review

THE 1926 News Board received the helm from their predecessors in April 1925. They took a paper which had been well started on the road to financial recovery and which was fast regaining its position in the school newspaper world.

At first the new board confined their attention to experimenting with new departments, and about the middle of the first term a standard of excellency was established which had been maintained up to the time of resignation.

For the first time in many years every man has remained active at his post until the Senior Board has retired from office. Too much cannot be said in praise of the Editor-in-Chief. He has given the school a fine editorial page. And those most necessary of men, the Managing Editor and his assistant, have ever balanced their paper. With the kind help of the 1927 Board the Secretary was able to discharge his duties more accurately and the Sport and Assignment Editors have surpassing anything previously attempted.

The business end of the publication has been run efficiently, and as a result the News has been able to meet all obligations.

In conclusion, the outgoing Board extends to the new men its best wishes, and it feels assured that they are well suited to carry on the work which has been done during this year of toil.

assured the editors of the week sufficient material.

The Board has again edited a uniform weekly of eight pages, oftentimes augmented by special pictorials or extra pages of important events. A special issue was published in commemoration of Prof. John Meigs' birthday anniversary. More cuts have been put in the issues, and when the occasion warranted small pictorial supplements were added. At the end of the Winter Term a large pictorial supplement appeared

The Record Review

TO ADOPT a new and radical policy is a difficult problem. To follow out a new and radical policy but a year old is even more difficult. This was the situation that faced the 1926 Record Board, and their success has been profound in spite of much shallow criticism from onlookers. The Record received a setback very early in the course of the year in the death of Warren Light, a very able and brilliant managing editor. When this position had been capably filled, the Record settled down to its former precision, and the strictly literary policy of the 1925 Board was pursued with a few determined alterations in the way of improvement.

The much criticized cover design of the previous year was abandoned for a conservative cover much on the order of the Atlantic Monthly, although the color was changed from month to month. The brevity of material formerly noted was adjusted, and a very well-balanced number was issued regularly as soon as a few exigencies were overcome.

As usual about twice as much poetry was produced as prose, but the prose was of a high grade of excellence. The book out the talent of the first, second and third formers.

All in all, it is not easy to recall a year in the history of the Record so full of plausible accomplishments. The success is due, to a great extent, to the careful and faithful criticism of Mr. Conley and Mr. Lester, the advisers.

reviews in particular received much praise from the Record's contemporaries. The Record completed another year without receiving an unfavorable criticism from a contemporary which is no small achievement.

Two accomplishments worthy of especial praise stand out in the wake of the 1925-1926 Record: a Record Library was established, and a Junior Record was begun. The first gave the school an opportunity to read all the modern literature it desired, and the latter drew

The Dial Review

OUR labour is ended, our task is completed. We have dreamed our dreams, seen our visions, had our aspirations, and experienced our tribulations. We have been hopeful and fearful; assured and anxious. Our efforts are before you—we can but hope for your approval. Our work is not perfect for that would be impossible. We have omitted and added what seemed most suitable. We have done our best.

Whatever praise won for this volume is due to the able advising of Mr. Charles L. Swift. Enough of gratitude and appreciation cannot be shown to him.

The Board wishes to express its appreciation to Mrs. Wendell for her aid in the tinting of the color cut.

Thanks must also be given to Fraser Wilkins, J. Webster Sandford, A. Holmes Crimmins, Mark W. Cresap, Arthur M. Mizener, William H. Hiester, Raymond E. Sargeant, and The Hill School News. Especially is great thanks due to Hal Patterson for his aid in writing the Diary and Class History — with good humor and promptness in spite of illness.

The contract for publication was given to E. A. Wright Company whose excellent work on last year's DIAL warranted renewal. As photographer, Phil Davis was again chosen. Many thanks are due him for his splendid work.

The duties of the 1927 Board begin with the publication of this volume. May all their efforts be crowned with success.

The Snooze Review

HIS year's Snooze Board adhered more strictly to the policy of burlesquing The News in every detail than did the previous Board. There were longer articles and less small jokes. Witty editorials took the place of the much over-used Mother Goose style poems. On the front page was a picture of a pullman car with members of the Board craning their necks from the windows. Within the ten-page issue could be found a parody on the Rover Boys and a personal article on Mr. Thomas. One of the features of The Snooze was a supplement on The Record which bore the title of The Hill Discord and it was an excellent take-off indeed. The Snooze could not have been complete without an article by Mr. Rolfe. His poem "Rhyme of a Sixth Former" was certainly a feature. Besides many well-written articles admirable Board which produced it, and to the tireless and peerless adviser, Mr. Rolfe, who sponsored and censored it.

there were pictures of various sorts and a half-page cartoon on "An Impression of The Hill."

The following is the opinion of the reviewer of The Snooze as it appeared in the school paper:

"Taken from every standpoint, from that of the aged reader as well as that of the cheerful youth, this edition stands out as the best balanced Snooze of recent years; a credit to the school, to the

Debating

DEBATING at The Hill experienced another favorable year, much interest being evinced by both the students and visitors. Under the careful coaching of the various advisers strong and capable speakers were developed, and two teams have been formed which would do credit to any school.

In the Fourth Form Camps subjects pertinent to school life comprised the principal part of the year's discussions. In the Upper Form Camps—likewise four in number—topics of national and international importance provided themes for argument. Among the subjects were those of world interest, such as the World Court, the situation in French Africa, the condition in China, foreign control of basic commodities; national topics, as Prohibition, the consolidation of the U. S. Air Forces, the 5-5-3 Naval Ratio, and the merits of the present system of collegiate football; and finally, more theoretical discussions on evolution's consistency with religion and the tendency of modern American youth.

The usual Inter-Camp debates were held in both Fall and Winter Terms. In the Fall Term Q. E. D. II defeated Q. E. D. I, and Wranglers II bested Wranglers I, the subject being "Resolved, that the Present Government of Soviet Russia Should be Recognized by the United States." In the Winter Term the camps met in similar fashion and debated the liberalizing of the entrance requirements of Yale and Princeton.

On February 27 a new line of rivalry between Lawrenceville and The Hill was inaugurated when two teams from each school met and debated the question "Resolved. That This House Favors the Principle of Prohibition." Each school had one team at home and sent its other into foreign territory. The Hill team at Pottstown, composed of Mizener, W. S. Jones, McCormick, and Graves as alternate, upheld the Affirmative and were victorious after a close battle. At Lawrenceville, The Hill took the Negative's side, and, represented by Fleming, Hubbard, Sandford, and Patterson as alternate, lost to the Lawrenceville team. Much credit is to be given Mr. Stahl for his untiring efforts to establish what it is hoped will be a lasting line of competition between the two schools, and The Hill may also well thank the other masters for their splendid efforts in coaching the teams.

Through his untiring efforts, Mr. Stahl, Head Coach of the Hill teams, has been able to establish firmly a high standard of debating in the School. Prior to his entrance into this activity forensic practice received little public interest and support. By introducing the Parliamentary Procedure into the various camps and by effecting dual meets with Yale Freshmen and Lawrenceville he has obtained recognition for this which it has never before attained. His successful coaching has been marked not only on the Hill campus but also among the old Hill students in collegiate debating circles.

CLUBS

The English Club

The English Club is a unique organization at The Hill. It is the one real club here and the members have fully appreciated the privileges which are granted to them. Perhaps the greatest of these privileges is the use of the club room in Memorial Hall which is furnished through the kindness of Dr. Edwards and Mr. Rolfe.

The weekly meetings of the club in Mr. Rolfe's room have been thoroughly enjoyed by all the members. These meetings have given them not only an opportunity to become acquainted with many of the great English classics but also to practice that fast disappearing art of reading aloud, an opportunity which has been valued highly by many of the group.

The banquets held at the Brookside Country Club, where members have read original compositions, have shown a surprising amount of literary ability in the Club. The assistance which Dr. and Mrs. Edwards have given in making these banquets a success has meant much to those who have come in contact with it. The members have had a great privilege in the opportunity they have had of coming into close contact with the Faculty members of the club. It is to be hoped the English Club will, in the future, maintain its position in the activities of the School.

The Press Club

The Hill School Press Club has been in operation for almost two years. It was organized in the Fall of 1924 by a group of students who wished to keep the newspapers of the nation informed about activities, both social and athletic, at The Hill. The club has had good co-operation both with the metropolitan dailies and with local press reporters.

Membership in the Press Club is restricted to five Sixth Formers and two Fifth Formers, who must be members of The News. The "heelers" for the club must compete for one year. The competition is limited to six contestants from each form, selected by the Senior Board, five of whom may be elected. At the present time F. Wilkins, C. B. Jones, J. Haslam, and M. Cresap are "heeling."

The Alumni Banquet

THE Hill Alumni held their fifteenth annual banquet the evening of May 16th, after the baseball game with Lawrenceville. The Hill victory had been greatly enjoyed by the visiting alumni, and the banquet started out to be a huge success. After a most delicious dinner, Mr. Rolfe, who was toastmaster of the evening, made a few introductory remarks about those who were to speak.

The first to be introduced was Mr. Daniel W. Streeter, '03, who gave a short talk entitled, "What of Our School Days?" He was followed by Oren B. Taft, '25, who spoke in behalf of the Sixth Form. He told of the Co-operative Government System and its history; of the student council; and of the Pipe Club. He closed by saying that he felt that at The Hill too much stress was placed on marks. The next two speakers Mr. J. Taylor Foster, '04, and Mr. William B. Given, '04, each rendered some very interesting reminiscences of the school as it was in his day. Mr. E. Merriam Powell, newly elected Secretary of the Alumni Association, then gave a short address in which he explained that he hoped to keep the alumni informed about the school, and asked for their co-operation in the matter. The closing speech of the evening was given by Dr. Edwards, who opened by thanking John Snowden and his associate cheer leaders for their work in creating school spirit. He also congratulated Sheldon Dick on the literary excellence of the "Record." He closed his short talk by thanking Mr. Hatfield, President of the Association, for his work in procuring such a record attendance at the Alumni Reunion.

The Literary Club Banquet

ON Monday evening, June 1st, the combined Literary Clubs of the School, including the News the DIAL, the Record, the English Club, and the Press Club, held their annual banquet at the Brookside Country Club. One hundred and forty guests and members attended. After the dinner the customary speeches were delivered.

Sheldon Dick, as toastmaster, introduced as the first talker Mr. Howard Bement. Mr. Bement read four brief poems from Love's Labor Lost. He then told the story of Philomela and Procne. Following this, Mr. Bement pointed out that when a person can pick up any book of poetry and realize and enjoy its beauty, then that person is saved. He concluded with a poem written in 1574 by Richard Banfield, entitled "The Nightingale."

J. D. Reifsnyder, Editor-in-Chief of the 1925 News Board, explained what The Hill has done for its students. He regretted the fact that few think of what the school has done to help them enter college, and expressed the wish that the boys might be more appreciative.

Mr. Allen followed Reifsnyder. He deplored the idle criticism so prevalent among the students and even the faculty, and urged that this destructive element be curbed.

Paul Pierce, Editor-in-Chief of the 1925 DIAL, compared the three Hill publications with the three departments of the Library: the literary, the newspaper, and the reference works. The Record is the literary side, The News the newspaper, and THE DIAL the reference book, as it summarizes the entire year. Pierce well explained the numerous duties of a business board of any paper.

Mr. Swift commented upon the splendid progress of THE DIAL. This is getting better every year, and each number, especially the 1925 copy, is a publication worthy of The Hill, and in which every boy should be proud to have his name.

The Editor-in-Chief of the 1925 Record Board, Sheldon Dick, spoke of the success, and defined it as not what has been done, but what has not been done. He carefully showed the value of reading, for among its many benefits is a very important one, the fact that it helps one to express himself.

Mr. Rolfe read an entertaining poem, containing descriptions of the literary publications. This was by far the most humorous piece of the evening.

Dr. Edwards, last speaker on the program, spoke of the road of life as if it were similar to any other road. He told that while motor-ing to Pottstown from Ithaca, he would often be plowing through a muddy, dreary road, when he would suddenly strike a fine cement highway. So it is with life, and it is often that the brightest times follow the darkest.

The Fathers' Association Banquet

DURING the early months of the year 1925 there was formulated at The Hill what is now known as The Hill Fathers' Association. The purpose of this organization was to bring the students, masters and fathers into a closer relationship, and furthermore to appoint committees to represent the Fathers' Association, to study the various needs of the school, and to interpret these needs to the parents.

The Executive Branch was to consist of Mr. Jemison as President, Messrs. Firestone, Fitchen, and Cresap, as Vice-Presidents, and Mr. Siedler, as Secretary. Two other boards were also elected; a committee to co-operate with Dr. Edwards, having as its officers Messrs. Ludlum, Foulkrod, Klauder, Massey, Siedler, and Warden; and another committee to represent the fathers while visiting here, this latter consisting of Messrs. Fitchen, Hill, and Durham. Mr. Jemison summed up the attitude of all present by stating, when called upon for a speech, that the Association stood for action and not for talk. Nevertheless he did urge that action be immediate, when it can perhaps do the most good. He advocated many improvements and expressed his sincere gratitude for the honor bestowed on him saying that he would do all to the best of his ability in proving himself worthy of it.

At a dinner in May at which the above mentioned elections were made there were delivered talks by Mr. Van Santvoord Merle-Smith, Mr. Clarence A. Warden, Mr. Mark W. Cresap, Mr. Alfred G. Rolfe and Dr. Boyd Edwards. Dr. Edwards, as the final speaker, practically summed up the entire conference in a speech, "What Is It All About?" He had grown up where the welfare of the village was community spirit, and he earnestly hoped that the welfare of The Hill would be guarded by school spirit. Dr. Edwards pictured the father entrusting his boy to the teachers' care. As soon as the parent has left, the students' future depends entirely upon the master, and unless the latter is willing to exert every effort to protect and help the boy, he is unfit for his position. The master should consider his pupil's family, and realize the great responsibility placed on his shoulders. On the other hand the father must have complete confidence in the teacher, and trust that with him his son is safe. Unless these two conditions are true, the school and school life are utter failures. The boy's life cannot be moulded by books or athletics, but by heart and mind. Favorably to influence the student's heart, and also to set a good example, parents and masters should be united in a heart-to-heart manner, for only with this complete understanding can the youth be developed. Dr. Edwards pledged that he would be faithful to the great trust bestowed on him by the fathers and closed by assuring that all instructors at The Hill would be the same.

Engraving and Printing for Colleges and Schools

is a special feature with us and the high standard of our workmanship is not only known from coast to coast as representing the best in Engraving and Printing, but it has penetrated foreign lands with credit.

Our facilities are the most modern, and we offer you the advantages that we enjoy through the strength of over fifty years' rigorous maintenance of a peerless standard.

Thousands upon thousands of our student friends have remembered us after bidding farewell to their Alma Mater, and are coming to us day after day for their Wedding Invitations, Dance Programs, Business Stationery, Calendars, Bonds and Certificates, as well as all their Engraving and Printing requirements.
